The history of the Parker name began with the ancient Anglo-Saxon tribes of Britain. The name is occupational, derived from the job of parker, the individual who was the guardian of the park grounds. Some Parkers were employed by noblemen who held large estates that needed the grounds of the estate or castle maintained. ^[1]

ANCIENT HISTORY

Extensive study of these ancient records reveal this surname, Parker, to be of Anglo Saxon origin. The first record of the Parker surname was found in Somerset where Anschetil Parcher was listed as holding lands in the Domesday Book of 1086. ^[2] One reputable source claims the name was "descended from Norman le Parcar or Forester, who held from Queen Matilda in 1083. He appears to be the same as Norman Venator of Salop 1086. From him descended Hugh Parcarius of Devon, 13th century." ^[3]

Another equally strong source claims that name to Thomas le Parker, temp. Edward III and the extinct baronet family Parker of Ratton traced their lineage to the time of Edward I in Sussex. ^[4]

"The church[of Willingdon in Sussex], principally in the early English style, contains portions in the decorated and later styles, with a square tower, and some interesting monuments to the Parker family. Henry Parker, who was secretary to Cromwell, and author of various tracts on religion and politics, was born at Ratton, in the parish." ^[5]

The name quickly became widespread throughout Britain as see by one of the first rolls, the Hundredorum Rolls of 1273 which lists: John Parcar in Dorset; Adam le Parker in Norfolk; and Peter le Parker in Yorkshire. ^[1]

"A family called Parker have been established for centuries in Lancashire. Browsholme Hall, near Clitheroe, was first built by Richard le Parker in 1380, and is still the family seat." ^[6]

"The Parkers, originally of North Molton,[Devon] acquired by their marriage with the heiress of Mayhew, temp. Elizabeth, the manor of Boringdon, and thenceforward made it their chief residence, until in 1712 they purchased Saltram, once the seat and residence of Sir James Bagge, the creature of Buckingham, and the ' bottomless bagge ' of the patriot Eliot. The Parkers were raised to the peerage in 1774, as Barons Boringdon ; and in 1815 advanced to be Viscounts Boringdon and Earls of Morley. Saltram House was rebuilt by them early in the last century, and was long reported the largest mansion in the county. " [7]

SPELLING VARIATIONS

During research it was noted that the Parker surname was spelled in different ways including Parker, Parkers, Parkeres and Parkere, and more variations would occur even in references to the same person. In order to explain this phenomenon we must look back to some of the earliest documents written in English. In the 14th century Geoffrey Chaucer, author of The Canterbury Tales, would spell "told" as "ytold" and "tolde" because at this time spelling rules did not truly exist. During this period the Parker family was found in Derbyshire. One of the first records of this noble name was about 1380 during the reign of King Richard II when Thomas Parker of Bulwell is recorded on the border of Derbyshire and Yorkshire. This name had been seated there since ancient times. The senior line descending from Thomas Parker, however, became extinct about the sixteenth century.

The junior lines produced the Earls of Macclesfield, and the Barons Morley and Monteagle, but these latter two baronies have been in abeyance since 1685. Largely from the Midlands of England the name flourished in the counties of Derby, Staffordshire, Warwickshire and Nottingham. By the 14th century an important branch evolved in Devon at a place called Whiteway. They settled at North Moulton in Devon.

"at Falmouth, Cornwall, "a slab of slate, in the south wall of the chancel, contains a memorial of Sir Nicholas Parker, knight, who succeeded Sir John Killigrew in the government of Pendennis Castle. This gentleman, who married the widow of Erisey, one of the co-heiresses of Milliton of Pengersick, died in 1608, and was succeeded in that dignity by Sir Nicholas Hals, of Fentongollan." [8]

They also moved northward to Scotland and William Parker of Kilmon, Perthshire, a parson, rendered homage in 1296, to King Edward I of England on his brief conquest of Scotland. The name continued to flourish in both England and Scotland for the next two or three centuries, particularly in Scotland where the family name acquired lands in Dundee and became associated with the Ogilvies. [9]

EARLY NOTABLES

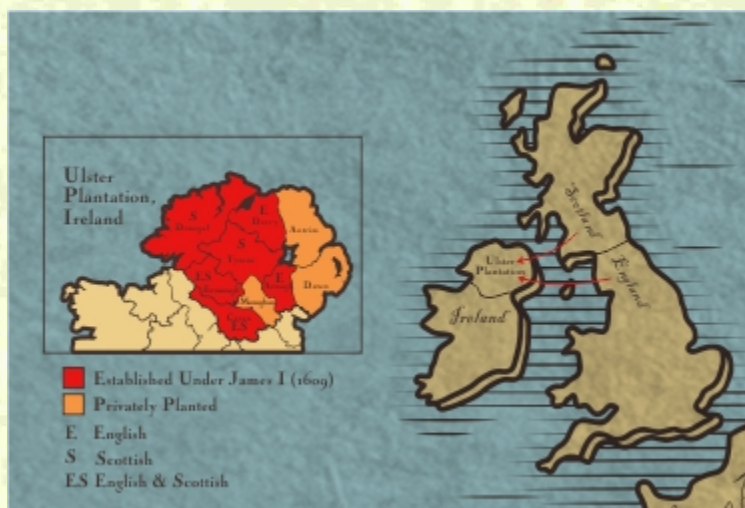

Distinguished members of the family include Thomas Parker, High Sheriff of Herefordshire in 1443 and 1451; Matthew Parker (1504-1575), English prelate, Archbishop of Canterbury; William Parker (d. 1617), an English captain, privateer who sailed with Sir Francis Drake, Mayor of Plymouth; Thomas Parker (1595-1677) Calvinist minister, founder of Newbury, Massachusetts; George Parker (c 1619-1673), an English landowner and politician who sat in the House of Commons in 1659 and 1660; Samuel Parker (1640-1688), an English churchman, Archdeacon of Canterbury in 1670; Sir Philip Parker (died 1675), an English politician who sat in the House of Commons from 1640 to 1648; Alice Parker, a resident of Salem Town, Massachusetts, executed on September 22, 1692 during the Salem Witch Trials; John Parker (c.1651-c.1719), an English army officer and Jacobite conspirator; Sir Thomas Parker (ca. 1666-1732), 1st Earl of Macclesfield, English judge and politician; and George Parker (1697-1764), 2nd Earl of Macclesfield, British astronomer, President of Royal Society (1752-1764).

The medieval period was an era of change and uncertainty in England; conflicts occurred often, but tended to be localized to one region. Conflicts between the king and parliament, and between the Catholics and the Protestants, along with plague and the great fire in London, made the 17th century a turbulent time.

Families settled in Ireland for a variety of reasons. Some went voluntarily, while others were exiles. In 1890, a birth census of English families in Ireland was taken. From that census, it was estimated that there were over 1,792 people bearing the surname Parker throughout Ireland; about 60 percent were living in the province of Ulster where the families were found in Antrim. ^[10] The family rose to high status there as seen by John Parker DD (died 1681), born in Dublin, son of another Rev. John Parker (d.1643), Church of Ireland clergyman who after the English Restoration, first as Bishop of Elphin (1660), then as Archbishop of Tuam (1667) and finally Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland (1679.)

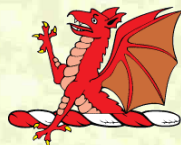

The problems at home forced many families to consider beginning a new life in the Americas. Yet the New World presented difficulties never faced before. Unfamiliar soils, climate, and diseases meant that colonists had to adapt or perish. Several of the early English attempts at colonizing North America met with disaster. Migrants bearing the Parker surname, or a variant spelling of this name, include Edward Parker, who arrived in Maryland in 1637; Captain George Parker who came to Boston in 1635; William Parker, who settled in Hartford, Connecticut in 1635; Abraham Parker, who was on record in New England in 1645; Nicholas Parker, his wife Ann, their daughter Mary and son Nicholas, who came to Roxbury Massachusetts in 1633; Henry Parker, who arrived in Maryland in 1664; as well as Charles Parker, who arrived in Jamaica in 1685.

Fideli certa merces

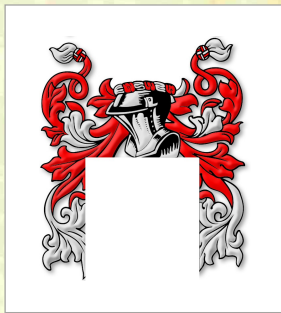

Parker

The practice of representing people with symbols is ancient, and in England this habit evolved with feudal society into a system of distinctive devices on shields. The heralds developed an extensive armory that had the important function of distinguishing members of the upper class from each other, whether at court or on the battlefield. Since then, heraldry has grown into a complex field with many rules and a terminology that requires some knowledge to interpret.

An Achievement of Arms such as the Parker arms depicted on the left typically consists of these parts: the Escrolls, displaying the family motto and name, the family crest (if any) seen above the helmet, the actual Coat of arms (also known as 'arms,' or 'the shield'), the Helmet depicted below the crest, the Torse on top of the helmet, and the Mantle draped from the helmet. Each of these elements will be described below. Supporters were a later addition to the Achievement; they are somewhat rare, and are usually personal to the grantee.

MANTLE OF PARKER

The mantle was spread over and draped from the helmet and served as a protection, 'to repel the extremities of wet, cold, and heat, and to preserve the armour from rust.' The numerous cuts and slits suggest that it had been torn and hacked on the field of battle. The style or design of the mantling is up to the individual heraldic artist, and it is usually depicted in the main color and metal from the shield. The helmet (or Helm) varied in shape in different ages and countries, often depicting rank. The Esquire's Helm, as depicted here, is generally shown silver, with a closed visor and facing to the dexter (its right). On top of the helmet is a Torse or wreath which was formed by two pieces of silk twisted together. Its purpose was to hold the crest and mantle on the Helm.

MOTTO

The motto was originally a war cry or slogan. Mottoes first began to be shown with arms in the 14th and 15th centuries, but were not in general use until the 17th century. Thus the oldest coats of arms generally do not include a motto. Mottoes seldom form part of the grant of arms: Under most heraldic authorities, a motto is an optional component of the coat of arms, and can be added to or changed at will; many families have chosen not to display a motto.

The motto for the Parker coat of arms displayed here is:

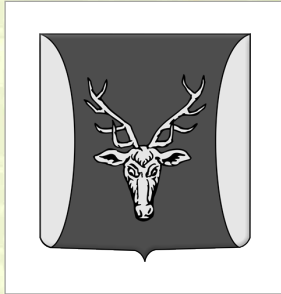

FIDELI CERTA MERCES

This translates as:

TO THE FAITHFUL THERE IS REWARD

SHIELD

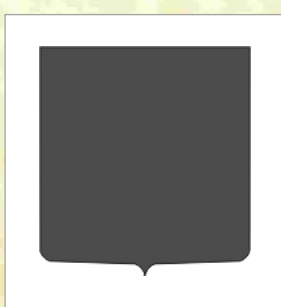

Shields (or Escutcheons) at first were painted simply with one or more bands of color or 'ordinaries'. Later, the ordinaries were used in conjunction with other figures or symbols. The Coat of Arms for the surname Parker can be described as follows:

THE PARKER SHIELD

PARKER ARMS

A black shield, charged with a buck's head between two flaunches.

BLACK SHIELD

BLACK SHIELD

Sable (Archaic or literary English for black), the coldest of the colors, corresponds to lead. Black, or "sable," is symbolic of sadness. It also corresponds with winter and is a humble color, suitable for the deeply religious. It denotes the qualities of knowledge, piety, serenity and work. Engravers represent it with numerous horizontal and vertical lines crossing each other.

Symbolic Virtues: Sable symbolizes the virtues of prudence and wisdom. The bearer of sable is obliged to protect widows and to guard the possessions of those who are absent. It is associated with serenity, pity and grief.

Precious Stone: Diamond

Planet: Saturn

Obligations: Protect widows and guard the possessions of those who are absent.

BUCKS

BUCKS (HIND, HART)

The Stag, Hart, Buck and Deer have variety of symbolic meanings. Each can indicate someone skillful in music and a lover of harmony. It may also indicate a person who foresees opportunities well.

In the latter case it is a symbol used for one who is unwilling to assail enemies rashly, who would rather stand his own ground than harm another wrongfully, and one who will not fight unless provoked.

Harmony, polity and peace are particularly associated with the female deer, called a Hind or a Doe. Antlers represent strength and fortitude.

"According to Guillim and Upton, these animals are symbolical either of one skilful in music and a lover of harmony, or of one that is politic and well foresees his times and opportunities; or again, of one who is unwilling to assail the enemy rashly, but rather desirous to stand on his own ground honestly than to annoy another wrongfully." [25]

Another source notes that the Stag or Hart is also an emblem of purity and fleetness.

The Stag was associated with healing, for he knew which medicinal plants to take in order to shake off the hunter's arrow.

"No wonder the stringent laws enacted by the Normans as to the hunting and killing of deer in[England] excited the fierce resentment of the common people, for there is every reason to believe that the creature was looked upon as a wild animal which anyone might chase and slay for his own benefit. " [26]

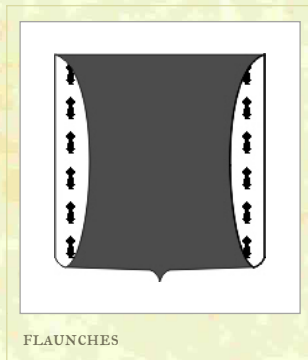

The person bearing this symbol was considered impervious to weapons. Other names for a deer include a brocket, which is a young Stag, a Buck, Roe, Roebuck, and a Fawn.

HEAD

The Human Head stands for honor. After all, the Head is the center of knowledge, thinking and learning for the body.

"The heads of 'blackamoors' or negroes generally refer to deeds of prowess in the Crusades." ^[25]

FLAUNCHES

Flaunches are segments of a circle with a large diameter, that project into the field from either side of the shield. They are a different color than the field and are referred to by the various names of flanches, flanks, flanges or flasques. They are always borne in pairs.

Flaunches were granted by sovereigns as a reward for virtue and learning, especially for services as an ambassador.

Flasques are the diminutives of flaunches and do not project as far into the shield. Vinders are even smaller and are incapable of bearing a charge and were typically granted to "gentlewomen who have deserved highly. The arms granted by Henry VIII. to his wife Katherine Howard are an example of this bearing. "

Square flaunches are drawn like two projecting triangles.

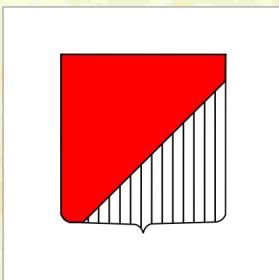

THE CREST

The Crest was worn on top of the helmet, and was usually made of wood, metal, or boiled leather. It provided the double advantage of easy identification and the addition of height to the wearer. The Crest for the surname Parker is described as follows:

THE PARKER CREST

AN ARM HOLDING A RED STAG'S ANTLER.

RED

RED

Gules, derived from an Old French word goules or gueules meaning "throats" translates into modern English as "red" and is the military color for excellence and fortitude. It is symbolic of nobility, boldness and ferocity, and can also represent fire and summer. Some ancient laws restricted its use to princes and their families. Red corresponds to the metal copper and is denoted in engravings by numerous perpendicular lines.

SALEM WITCH TRIALS

The Salem Witch Trials of 1692 were one of colonial America's most notorious cases of mass hysteria. More than 200 people were accused of witchcraft and 30 were convicted with 19 executions via hanging and 1 being pressed to death. No one was safe, many accusers were then accused, neighbor turned on neighbor and, in some cases, people used the hysteria as an opportunity to land grab and motivations of jealousy. The accusers, mostly teenage girls admitted they had fabricated their charges; many details became available of the lengths of punishment performed to extract confessions, including on the youngest a 5-year-old girl.

Abigail Williams testified & saith that an old man that goes with two fishes hath appeared to her many times by pinching & bringing the book for her to get her hands unto, & the man told her his name was Jacob the Father of Geo: Jacobs & the Grandfather of Margaret Jacobs & he had made said Margaret get her hand to the book & Sarah Churchwell & his son Geo:
Jacobs & his wife & another woman & her husband viz:
Mr. English & his wife: also that the said Margaret had hurt her pretty much to day & at other times & brought her the book several times to night but not before.

We whose names are underwritten testify that we heard the aforesaid
Abigail relate the charge aforesaid. This 10th of May 1692

However, a defective soil foundation and design flaws led to the dam's collapse in 1928 when it gave way sending a flood of 120 foot high water down the canyon, the fact that within seventy minutes or less after the collapse the reservoir was virtually empty, the failure must have been sudden and complete. Many people were swept away or buried in the silt, some of the victims were washed out to sea, many victims remain unidentified as there was workers in the area for the Powerhouse.
